

2018 Jewish Healthcare Foundation Summer Internship

ABOUT

The Jewish Healthcare Foundation (JHF) is recruiting graduate students interested in innovations in healthcare delivery, policy, and patient safety for paid summer internship opportunities. JHF is a public charity that offers a unique blend of research, education, grantmaking, and program management to improve population health and the outcomes of care. JHF has two supporting organizations: the Pittsburgh Regional Health Initiative (PRHI) and Health Careers Futures (HCF).

In 2018, Summer Interns will contribute to a new, innovative project launched by JHF: The Museum to the Future of Health Care. The virtual museum, in development through late 2018, aims to serve as a thought-catalyst to major healthcare players including clinicians, policy makers, educators, researchers, and governing boards. With design already under way, interns will aid in the development of the museum by embracing the role of breakthrough technology in shaping the future of the healthcare system. Several floors are already “under construction,” including those related to the health of women, seniors, and adolescents. Interns will contribute to parts of the museum that align with their areas of interest and academic background.

As an intern, you will:

- Shape a vision of health care’s future by contributing to JHF’s virtual museum and team projects
- Learn PRHI’s Perfecting Patient CareSM quality improvement methodology for health professionals
- Become part of a project team with experienced professionals in the field
- Present your experience and contributions to JHF staff and Boards
- Gain exposure to JHF, PRHI, and HCF
